- Tailor internship to fit your own interests
- Explore your own goals and aspirations

Explore job opportunities for yourself.

The internship program in the School of Communication Studies is flexible and can be customized to fit individual students' interests and goals. The internship program is designed to help you, as a student, explore diverse workplace opportunities, achieve success as a contributing member in an existing organization, and build a résumé of experience that will help you secure future employment.

DIVERSE OPPORTUNITIES

The Program provides assistance in your internship search; however, the responsibility for securing an internship rests with you, the student.

Your opportunities are as broad as your own initiative: you may explore local, regional, national, or international internships.

Once secured, you will fulfill the terms of your internship while receiving course credit from the School of Communication Studies.

The School of Communication Studies Internship Program will extend students' understanding of the complex intra and extra organizational relationships which are formed and maintained through communication.

REALIZING YOUR POTENTIAL

Participating in the School of Communication Studies Internship Program provides you, the student, with excellent opportunities to strive for personal as well as professional success.

Success as a participant in the School of Communication Studies Internship Program will extend beyond course credit.

SECURING YOUR FUTURE

Students who complete the School of Communication Studies' Internship Program will maintain connections with individuals and organizations directly related to their future goals and aspirations. Moreover, you, the student, may record your internship experience on your personal résumé, which will be valuable as you seek permanent employment after graduation.
